Benton was a bit more attentive than most married men, and knew no clubhouse or had no business that kept him late at It was a very deplorable accident. night. For six years he had never spent a night away from his wife. And one meraing he woke up and came to the conclusion that he was horribly bored, that he wanted to be free and that his love for his wife was a bit of Quixotic imagination.

The whole morning he thought the matter over and then partly to get away from his environment and partly for a change he took the train for New York. He walked around the city aimlessly natil about 3 o'clock and then he walked to Central park. A woman passed him and half turned.
